CITRONELLE MAN RECEIVES TWO-YEAR SENTENCE FOR AGGRAVATED IDENTITY THEFT

For his participation in a stolen mail/aggravated identity theft conspiracy, Terell Demarcus Shepard of Citronelle, Alabama today received a 24-month prison sentence from United States District Judge William H. Steele.

Shepard pled guilty in July 2008 to one count of aggravated identity theft, further admitting that he had committed the crime of bank fraud by presenting personal checks that he knew to be stolen for payment at local banks and merchants. The two year sentence is mandate by federal statute.

This case was investigated by the United States Postal Inspection Service and the Citronelle Police Department. It was prosecuted by Assistant United States Attorney D. Andrew Sigler.
